A Dream of the Past.

BY J K C FORREST

There sa joy for the young, There a a dream for the old, Far brighter it an annlight Can ever unfold

There sa bloom in the heart,
Where bright hopes are amass d
As it revels in joy
O er a dream of the Post '

There a 2 vision that lights
On the mind a inward eight,
As inconbeams fall genilly,
When gathers the night,
And its radiance, like startight,

Though the sky be o ercust In the light of the soul, When it dreams of the Past

There is hope for the mourner, There is hope for the mourner,
As his wears away.
For the scenes of the past
May be present to-day
Though the heart may be seared
By Adversity a blast
Yet there a joy in the soil
As it dreams of the Past

For oit when the coldness Of friendship we mourn, To the friend of our youth We all trustfully turn,

When the simile on our soul, Though too fleeting to last, Is a smile on our youth-

Youth points to the Future,
And Hope cheers him now,
For the Rainbow of Promise
Encircles his brow,
Age turns to the dist,
As time fleetch fast,
But he goning with a smile But he points with a smile As he dreams of the Past

The Poet regards not The Present a acclaim
He looks to the Future
